"Photoshop is not a free program and you'll have to pay for it, but the good news is that it can be used to produce high-quality images for absolutely nothing," Jonathan Grudin, a computer artist and photographer, tells the E-Commerce Times. The first version was made available in October 1990, and Adobe first called it Photoshop. It was commercialized in 1992 and sold for $995. By the end of 1996, the program had been downloaded more than 10 million times. The program became the dominant standard for digital imaging, replacing earlier programs such as PhotoPaint and Adobe Photo-Paint. The Mac version was made available in March 1992 and the Windows version debuted in November 1991. The earliest version, known as Photoshop Version 1.0, was limited to raster-based editing. It shipped at the beginning of 1991 and remained the standard until Version 4.0 in 1996. Adobe then made major software upgrades on a three-year cycle. Version 5.0 brought the ability to edit vector based graphics. It was first made available for Windows in October 1999, and the Mac version shipped the following year. In 2002, Photoshop CS (Creative Suite) 1 was made available for Windows. Adobe has continued to make improvements and offer new features. Most recently, the company added support for on-the-fly 3D effects as well as natural-looking bokeh effects. It also added support for the iPad in its latest CS6 release and made it easier to work with Google apps. Addition of 'Photoshop' to Other Software Originally, Photoshop was the only image editing software. Many companies created competitors, but Adobe kept up with the program's development, and it was a great commercial success. "The key to Photoshop's huge success was its image editing features, which were so superior to previous products that it just about defined the future of image editing, unlike the other products that were marginal or lacked one or another of the basic features that we now take for granted," Grudin tells the E-Commerce Times. However, due to its share of market dominance, Photoshop became the dominant word in the computing world. Other software companies that created products similar to Photoshop adopted the Photoshop name. For example, Adobe introduced its D-Lightbox program after modifying Photoshop. "When Photoshop became so pervasive, I think that it just became a derogatory term -- something that we just didn't

The Huffington Post, citing an anonymous source, has obtained a letter sent to President Obama by a gay Republican group. The letter, addressed to “Mr. President” and sent this morning, urges Obama to be “the leader that America needs.” The letter continues with a claim that Obama is the first president to take pride in being gay. The statement contradicts Obama’s recent remark about not being “the first gay president,” along with his announcement that he is “partly in the closet.” The letter goes on to claim that the nation is “less free, less free to pursue their God-given gifts and opportunities, and less free to live as they choose.” The letter claims that Obama is enabling these “unnecessary freedoms by promoting the federal Employment Non-Discrimination Act.” The letter ends with a discussion of Obama’s “radical” military policies and the fact that they “increase the risk of another terrorist attack against America.” Though the letter discusses the President’s gay rights policies, it doesn’t appear to contain any of the gay-related politics of Michael Bloomberg, Rick Santorum, or Fred Karger. One example is the letter’s claim that, “American has been less free since the President decided to follow your direction to host his first White House reception for openly gay and lesbian members of the federal government.” A CBS News poll from last June found that 51 percent of Americans thought that Obama should keep his promise not to discuss his personal life, while 47 percent thought that he should name his children, Barack and Michelle. The question did not mention the word “gay,” but then again it never does. If the anonymous letter is indeed authored by people associated with the group Log Cabin Republicans, then its timing is inopportune. The GOP will try to attack Obama as an out-of-touch progressive, and would prefer Obama appear as a latter-day Abe Lincoln. His announcement that he is gay won’t help. Add to these constant talking points: Obama’s “gay spokesperson” Kevin Jennings, his nomination of three openly gay foreign ambassadors, his commissioning of the US P-3 Orion, the Coast Guard’s decision to allow gays to serve, and — of course — his decision to allow troops to serve openly.
