TEL: +81-3-5965-9701Pittsburgh is a unique city in that it's bigger and has more urban problems than most places, but it isn't one of those cities where "there's nothing to do here!". Sure, you might find that as a young adult, because Pittsburgh is chock-full of places to throw your money away, but for everyone else, there's stuff to do in Pittsburgh. You've probably heard about the Waterfront, though I didn't see it from a great distance. I saw it and it has great, big, tall skyscrapers and concrete and cars, and what the hell? I liked it. So, if you're visiting Pittsburgh, you should check out the Waterfront. Head to River Avenue and go down it to the river and look. Going down the river is great. You could just hang out on the river from the Japanese bridge, but, why bother? Don

Maculopapular exanthema associated with diffuse rash, fever and encephalopathy. We report a healthy 2.5-year-old boy who developed maculopapular exanthema, diffuse rash, fever and subsequent encephalopathy with a good outcome after oral prednisone treatment. Renal and liver function, complete blood count, and serum electrolyte levels were normal. A skin biopsy sample from a lesion on his cheek revealed lichenoid dermatitis with focal lymphocytic infiltration in the dermis, which is different from juvenile dermatomyositis. These cutaneous findings improved within 2 weeks of systemic corticosteroid treatment. Adult-onset acute macular rash with fever and encephalopathy was reported in a 2-year-old girl. However, this macular rash has never been associated with benign infantile systemic convulsion and nonspecific EEG changes. There are few reports of cutaneous signs in newborns. Designed by Frank Stefano, the new Cinta will be constructed at the former location of the Cinta White at the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles on Highway 71. Those who have driven by the facility know that it was recently upgraded from a dealership to a TxDOT service facility. Since then, the old Cinta facility has seen little activity. Stefano Inc., a member of Detroit's Design Studio International, has been contracted to design the new location. The building is expected to be finished by late 2014. "We're doing it in a way that is going to be functional and useful and sustainable, but still have a 1950s feeling to it," said Stefano, who is one of the most respected names in design within the U.S. Stefano's design will be a departure from the new TxDOT building at the Texas Department of Transportation Highway 71/Eastex Freeway service center, which has an architectural style similar to the old Cabot Street. "Right now, I'm going to try to put it in a way that gives the feeling that the building was here for 50 years, not 20 years," he said. The new Cinta White facility will be about 10,000 square feet, somewhat smaller than the 12,300 square feet at the old location. After a contract was signed with the trucking industry, a 14-year bond was sold to raise about $16.4 million to build

Phonic and Auditory Tasks for the Auditory Cortex 3 Steps to Help Your Auditory Cortex Process Sounds: Smell your way to an effective treatment for your Auditory Cortex You can use aromatherapy to help your Auditory Cortex process sound by employing the power of smell. Many people have experienced the sense of calm that aromatherapy brings, especially when used in food, bedding, and products in the home. Aromatherapy can be helpful with auditory processing skills, including speech recognition. It can soothe your nervous system, provide oxygen for the brain, and help you relax. Try a light sleep or sound bath—warm lavender water is way to achieve a calming effect, as is hot Epsom salts. The aroma of lavender has been shown to improve emotional response to music, which is an important part of auditory processing. Developing cochlear processing skills can help increase your sensitivity to sound in general. You can play with your IEM like a boss—adjust the volume so that you are comfortable and engage in specific activities without feeling stressed. Consider soundproofing specific rooms (eg. play areas) in your home—this will help you develop your auditory skills, especially if you have a TV in a particular room that you find particularly irritating. Go the extra mile—literally Consider beginning each day by listening to your smartphone in silence. Note how sharp and clear your sounds become. This can help you develop accurate sound perception
