

This year's game also includes innovations to the Frostbite engine such as game engine enhancements to ensure that every decision on the pitch is as realistic as possible, while also allowing for more individual and tactical player movement than ever before in FIFA. In order to best utilise the Frostbite engine, the developers at EA have built the engine using English Premier League data. Although the engine and game data are exclusive to this region, Frostbite will operate at a global level so players anywhere in the world will be able to access this content. The aim for the game designers has been to make the pitch the most immersive of any FIFA game to date, allowing players to experience that feeling of actually being a professional footballer. This year players will be able to experience the thrill of heading the ball via the Digit Touch Control. The Digit Touch Control enables players to use both thumbs on the controller to precisely place an accurate shot, while also ensuring that, by moving around to properly aim the ball, players can compensate for any movement of the controller. Play Video Play: IGN WWE 2K17 Interview Q: Subtract 2 Dates in SQL Server 2008 I need to subtract 2 dates but the format is in YYYY-MM-DD and I need the output in YYYYMMDD. Say today is 20-12-2012 and I need the output as 20121231. A: Another option is to extract the first digit using the RIGHT function and then discard it. Assuming the date is stored in a DateTime variable, you could do the following: DECLARE @date AS Datetime = '2012-12-20' SELECT DateDiff(DD, 0, DateAdd(DD, RIGHT(@date.Value, 1), 0)) This works because the first digit after the date is the day of the year, so by adding or subtracting from that, you're getting the correct date.
