A 10-year-old girl was admitted to our hospital because of high fever, polyarthralgia and high level of serum ALT, AST, LDH, ferritin. She had a medical history of acute respiratory infection when she was 5 years old and had been treated with acyclovir. Physical examination revealed polyarthralgia and rash with numerous scattered papules, lacrimation, exophthalmia, eyelid edema and conjunctivitis. Laboratory data revealed marked eosinophilia and elevation of serum levels of ferritin, ALT, AST, LDH, IgE and IgM. Since a systemic non-tuberculous mycobacteria infection such as tuberculosis was ruled out by various examinations, we diagnosed her as having idiopathic hypereosinophilic syndrome

What's new:

: Gremolata Nainai's Recipe: Gremolata Fill a large bowl with canola oil heated to 375 degrees F. In the hot oil, mix together the breadcrumbs and breadcrumbs toasted with garlic until all is breadcrumb-coatings. Add two cloves of minced garlic to the breadcrumbs. Add a bit of sea salt and a generous amount of black pepper. Mix all together until the crust is to your preference. The meat won't stick much to this crust so don't worry about a spot here or there... the Ube's crackling and seasoning will surely fill in any gaps. In a hot pan, fry steaks on each side of the meat being careful to not miss any spots to really ensure the meat is evenly done. Remove steaks with a slotted spoon and drain on a rack. Now move your attention back to the prepared breadcrumbs. When the steaks are done, test the breadcrumbs with two of the remaining pieces of the steaks. The breadcrumbs should still be kind of soggy, but they are done. At this point you are ready to assemble the meat. Place two of the cooked steaks on a platter. Sprinkle breadcrumbs over the steaks. Drizzle bechamel sauce over each steak and arrange herbs (sage and parsley) over the steaks to taste. Put steaks back in over and serve. Now it's time to start baking the bread. You will bake the bread covered or uncovered depends on how thick they get at the end of baking. Start to medium, but reduce the heat after 30 minutes if the bread is already super thick. Uncover, bake for 10-15 minutes and let crust dry completely. Remove crusts and place on a cooling rack. Note: If you are making this bread in the winter, to save on the cost of heating up the house, you could bake these loaves in an oven with a convection current. Place two halves of the bread in an oven pre-heated to 350 degrees F and bake for 30 minutes, or until the bread is just slightly browned on the surface. Oil-cake Potatoes Recipe (this half of Nainai's recipe is for my blood friend Sinam for St. Valentine's Day) Take 2 cups of oil
