I've been trying to figure out how to read and write to an SQLite database in a background task in a browser. SQLite databases are extremely fast, but a simple text file seems to be faster. Also, while I can't find much discussion on the internet, an addition to the SQLite3 C++ API seems to be required for writing to a database. A: If you use Firefox, you may be able to use a Firefox Add-on to achieve this. Firefox has a JS-API that allows it to access SQL databases, that would allow you to write a simple C++ extension. There is also a JSTalk, but for this particular task, I think a Firefox add-on would be easier to develop. Q: Raspberry Pi and string value Can someone tell me what is wrong with this code? import RPi.GPIO as GPIO GPIO.setmode(GPIO.BCM) GPIO.setup(4, GPIO.IN, pull_up_down=GPIO.PUD_UP) while True: digitalWrite(GPIO.GPIO14, False) digitalWrite(GPIO.GPIO15, False) if digitalRead(GPIO.GPIO14): print("1") GPIO.setup(GPIO.GPIO15, GPIO. 595f342e71
