The first version of Sibelius was released in 1989 to be part of the SoundScape .Q: How to break a for loop without having to break the whole function? This is a very basic question in c++ but I have run into the problem quite frequently and been looking for the solution to this for a while. I have a class with a function, it looks like this: class Inventory { public: Inventory(int* inventory, int amount); void BuyItem(int i, int qty); void SellItem(int i, int qty); int GetAmount() const; void UpdateAmount() const; private: int * inventory; int amount; //more code };

Let's say I have a main that contains a loop that looks like this: `int main() { for (i=1; iBuyItem(i, j); } } return 0; }` This loop will keep running because there is no way to break the outer loop without stopping the whole application, even if you use an if statement. Is there a way to break the loop inside the for-loop without having to break the whole function? A: d0c515b9f4
