Druid has become one of the most exciting game concepts of recent years. The idea of a game where you journey into the world of the druid was intriguing. The new concept of combat, based on drawing magic from the land rather than from weapons, was highly innovative and attracted me to the game. In the druid village, the game takes you on a journey to find your parents. Your father was struck down by a lightning bolt on a stormy night, and your mother is in a coma. You can play in multiple ways: VR: HMD mode, standard locomotive display PSVR: Standard locomotive display, based on pre-VR controllers System Player: Operating controls using system controller. Keyboard and mouse: Operating controls using keyboard/mouse only. The 'VR' mode is the most immersive and features full locomotive movement with VR controllers. It also uses standard locomotive avatars, as well as 3D environments and animations. This mode is the most time consuming as the locomotives will move realistically, also allowing the player to see the locomotives in full detail. The 'System Player' mode features the use of manual controls and locomotive avatars, with the locomotives operating as a'steam driven plow' or'steam driven car' - simulating the controls of a conventional steam locomotive. The first two modes can be connected together, allowing the use of both locomotive avatars, and locomotive controls. Steam Train VR is full of detail, and will allow the VR HMD player to truly immerse themselves in the railway world, fully experiencing all the atmosphere, the sounds, the colours, and the emotion of steam locomotion. Also included with Steam Train VR is a locomotive mockup, including tender, cab, and a saddle tank tank car, all constructed from the BVE Steam Train Sandbox. Steam Train VR is supported on the Steam Platform in both the VR and non-VR modes. This includes the latest Steam releases at time of release, as well as future releases.
