* The Facility Project is a first-person investigation game set in a shadowy research facility. In it you'll solve puzzles, collect evidence, and avoid strange creatures. * The game, in its current form, is playable in approximately 5 hours. I plan to add more content in order to extend the experience, and to see how long I can maintain the level of quality. There is a story behind each room, a mystery that will stay with you. * The Facility Project will be released on Steam in a native Windows version, with Mac and Linux support possible later on. * The game will be free to play. I do not have a predetermined price, but I will keep the majority of the income from the game to fund further development of the title. * The goal is to release an enjoyable experience in the first year of development. * The game will be designed for PC only, but I do plan to add Mac and Linux support in a future version. * By purchasing, you're supporting the studio who creates The Facility Project. If the project becomes a success, I will always prioritize supporting other indie studios that are doing interesting and unique games. * I am currently working on a near future free Halloween update of the game. * More information about the game and an interview with me can be found on my website and on Twitter. * See the facility walkthrough here: Discussions about The Facility Project Helpful reviews Reviews of The Facility Project First of all, I just wanted to say that not only is this game a blast to play, but i'm very happy to see it on steam. There are some great games, but i have to say this one has really blown me away. I do not have much time in my day to play games, but when i do play a little i have to say, this is one to get and to put on your list. The Facility Project is a dark and creepy game, and honestly I love it because it takes me back to my childhood. It reminds me of the horror movies I watched as a child: "The Shining", "Poltergeist", "Nightmare on Elm Street", "Curse of the Demon" and many others. It's rather sad, and somehow I like it. To start with it's very simple. You get into this building, explore it, search around for items,

What's new:

brings together 2 communities Sven Co-op is a farm and food co-op in the Boise, ID area. It started with two farmers who wanted to grow food for their families. Since starting in 1989 they have grown to support over 75 members and employ eight permanent staff and several seasonal staff members. They have expanded their productive space by purchasing land to continue to grow their meat and produce. I sat down with Lori Lightfoot, Business Manager of Sven Co-op, to ask what has been most influential in their success and how they are able to provide their members with fresh, pure, wholesome food at lower than farmers markets. Pamela: What brought you to the mentality of a co-op? Lori: There is a thing called Linehan's Pyramid. It is a term used in the agricultural industry to break down where a farm business should be at: Will it produce an excess of profit, will there be an excess of surplus for the farmer to make a living, and will the farmer have surplus to reinvest? I started working for a farm in North Idaho and serving as the marketing manager for a community supported agriculture (CSA) program. I started looking into other local farms in the area and found there were small farms of about 70 to 80 acres. I became interested in starting a cooperative to meet farmers' immediate needs, which is a thing called the "profile of demand". I started looking at other cooperatives and right away I thought, "how do you keep this going?" There is nothing like the satisfaction that comes from working with other farmers, growing food, selling food, producing food and feeding people. And also, while farming is really challenging on our lives, as a community, most of us want to eat healthy, high quality food. Pamela: Tell me a little more about the importance of healthy food. Lori: There are so many things tied to our economic well-being and well-being as a healthy human. We work up to 70 hours or more per week. From a standpoint that supports each other's health or nourishes each other mentally, when we become human, there is so much supportive and tangible nourishment that comes from community. We have all heard stories about supporting each other in times of need through a crisis. And that is really a great example of the value of a community. I want to go even deeper about that. Being animals that are inside
