Waste of time 5 By daily dreams This is a waste of time. First the talk can not be tailored to your specific health records and second it is too much work trying to find the right answer in your medical records. And finally, there are no options for advanced customization in the customization options that are limited to just two standard sounds for none-English speaking people. All that's left is to record the medical exam, leave it in the cloud to listen to while driving and scrolling through your facebook feed, and then have to double the price of your car insurance.

Non Experience 3 By Nathan M This program is a joke, users claim that this program is "The standard in medical dictation", to which I say, not really. I've worked for a huge health care entity since 2008, and this program is nothing like what they were originally used to. Every time we transcribe a dictation we have to look up how to pronounce a name, what are the correct treatments for a certain illness, etc. With this program I just ignore it, get the words out, and then after transcribing it I have to go back to their website to look up the answer. It's time consuming and there's just so many programs out there that are geared toward proper transcription.

No I don't recommend this program. Absolutely rubbish 1 By SteveC11 I have been using this since 2012. In 2017 it crashed with this notification: "Dragon Naturally Speaking has detected that your computer has stopped responding. Dragon Naturally Speaking is currently shutting down". It then just stands in the corner with a shutdown animation for 5 minutes before restarting. It is impossible to use this program if the video card is not compatible. We have a mac mini with 2 Nvidia GTX 1080 cards in. We have tried it with 2 drivers from Nvidia and no difference. No one has the answer and even Nvidia have no solution except to buy a new computer. This program is absolutely rubbish. I have been using this since 2012. In 2017 it crashed with this notification:

The reconstruction of defects of the jaw, the upper and the middle third of the face, of the neck and the skull base requires complex and demanding procedures. In the Department of Oral and Maxillofacial Surgery at the University Hospital in Cologne a CT-guided method was successfully introduced in 1993 to mark the operative field in the skull base and to assist in reconstructing facial and skull base defects with free muscle transplantation. The authors present their experience with the CT-guided system over the past seven years and evaluate it with respect to an external marking system to find the best way to mark the field for surgery in these cases and to control the success of the transplantation. Retention and biodegradation of BPA and BPS in wastewater-irrigated soils under lab scale conditions. The toxicology and potential environmental effects of bisphenol A (BPA) and bisphenol S (BPS) have recently received much attention. The soil-plant-water system was chosen as one of the most relevant experimental models for studying the influence of the irrigation with contaminated wastewater on the fate of BPA and BPS. Two soils were used as representing the two dominant soil types in the world: a sandy soil (sandy loam, pH 8.2) and a clayey soil (clay loam, pH 8.3). BPA and BPS (single application) were applied at three concentration levels (8.3, 6.5, 4.2 mg kg⁻¹ dry weight for BPA and 5.1, 3.6 and 2.3 mg kg⁻¹ dry weight for BPS). The results showed that under lab scale conditions, a significant increase of BPA and BPS concentration was observed in the sandy loam soil with the highest concentration of 360 microg g⁻¹ and 80 microg g⁻¹ for BPA and BPS respectively, at the end of the experiment. In the clay loam soil, a significant increase of BPA and BPS concentration
