A robust multithreaded environment for solving reaction. mcnp visual software free 19Q: Why does flash wait for SetInterval to finish before updating page? I'm loading data in flash via javascript: var a = new flash.FileReference(); a.save(data, "myData.xml"); a.createMovieClip(400, 0); a.load(); This is inside the "onload" callback. In my debuggers I see "myData.xml" being loaded into the memory. But when I close the swf, if I access the event loop, the variable will still have the value from before the load(). If I call it again within 10 seconds, it'll be the right thing. Why is it doing this, and how can I avoid it? I can put up a progress bar that shows the loading progress, but I would like to avoid this, as it makes the animation unnecessarily jerky. A: I don't really know if that's possible, but it's certainly possible to add text that could be updated in the onload function. var a = new flash.FileReference(); a.save(data, "myData.xml"); a.createMovieClip(400, 0); a.load(); a.text = "some text here"; That will make a "flash.display.Text" object appear. Then you can create a MovieClip for it with the "new" keyword, and "addChild" it to the stage. You can also add some texts with "startTextField()" and "endTextField()" if you want to have some simple textfields, which you can in manipulate once you've added them to the stage. A fake 'Faster' font made in 2013 was the subject of the NY Times blog post "Speed Up: The World's Fastest Font."
