Intraoperative monitoring of somatosensory evoked potentials from the facial nerve during acoustic tumor resection. To assess the usefulness of the facial somatosensory evoked potential (SEP) during acoustic neuroma surgery. Prospective, nonrandomized study. Neurosurgical department of a university hospital. Thirty-six patients undergoing acoustic tumor removal. Facial SEP were assessed intraoperatively during a removal of an acoustic neuroma. A new stimulation technique was used that delivered stimulation through the intact facial skin in the vicinity of the tumor. A microcatheter was used to increase the contact area between the stimulating and recording electrode. Pre- and postresection latency and amplitude of the latencies and amplitudes of the primary facial nerve components as well as the postoperative facial function. Compared with postoperative facial nerve function, the latency and amplitude of the facial SEP were significantly decreased in 19 of 36 patients. The proportion of patients showing decrease in amplitude of the facial SEP during acoustic neuroma removal was significantly higher Occ13bf012

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a power control circuit for an LED lamp, and more particularly to a power control circuit for an LED lamp, which employs at least one switching mode power supply circuit and at least one driving circuit to achieve a balance between driving and controlling a lamp load, and can enhance the stability of the lamp lighting up. 2. Description of the Related Art An LED lamp is a type of solid state lighting technology. The LED lamp is a popular lighting solution for indoor applications because of its long service life, miniaturized size, and superior features such as quick response speed, high color rendering index, and low energy consumption. Conventional light emitting diodes are more expensive than conventional incandescent lamps or halogen lamps. Therefore, it is desirable to make power control circuits more stable and energy-saving. FIG. 1 illustrates a conventional power control circuit for an LED lamp. As shown in FIG. 1, the power control circuit for an LED lamp includes a power supply 1, a first light emitting diode 11 and a second light emitting diode 12, a first driving circuit 13, a second driving circuit 14, and a protection circuit 15. The driving circuit 13 includes a first switch 131, a first capacitor 132, a first diode 133, and a power supply voltage VCC. The driving circuit 14 includes a second switch 141, a second capacitor 142, a second diode 143, and a power supply voltage VCC. A power supply voltage VCC is connected between the cathode and the anode of a light emitting diode, and the power supply voltage VCC is the same as the input voltage of the power supply 1. The switching device 131
