If ava find is in Â .Giro d'Italia 2014: Coppi or Nino, the question of the Giro Vincenzo Nibali runs at the Vigorelli stadium during the Giro d'Italia. Photo: Marco Fredesini/Getty Images Sport The 2014 Giro d'Italia, which starts Thursday in Montezemolo, no longer has two, but just one, protagonist: Nibali, the speed merchant who could win stages solo, and the young, but not young, Giuseppe at the same time. It is impossible to predict whether Giuseppe is going to win the Giro, because such fine margins of victory are never predictable, but as a support rider for a coach like Fausto Coppi, his chances are more likely than not. In 1929, Coppi's Giro debut, the Londra-Roma stage was considered a spectacle that few of us will ever witness again. A breakaway of about 40 riders would not even enter the stage in the Valleys of Grenoble, but after that none of the riders from that break survived the long descent. With more than 4 km to go, Coppi, taken by surprise, was left alone with one wheel in front of him, as a mass of spectators were astonished by the spectacle, rather than the rider. In the end, the eternal defender of the day, Coppi won in the end, but even if he had lost, would not have been considered a loser, because he would not have been anything less than a champion that day. This is how the old Coppi feels today: he will not be the champion, but he is a winner for many reasons. The Italian Press reported in the last few days that Fausto Coppi might not ride in the Giro d'Italia. Although he is still a strong rider, he might not be able to keep up with the other young riders like, for example, Vincenzo Nibali, because of an injury. Instead, the team leader on the Giro, Michele Bartoli, explained: e79caf774b
